the boat rocks. It is the foreign and not the domestic situation which is giving the revolutionary Government sleepless nights.

Archbishop Fumasoni-Biondi was born at Rome. September 4, 1872. He was naintant of the College of the Propaganda under Cardinal Laurenti, and was appointed titular Archbishop of Diocles on November 14, 1816. In November 37,6x160, at 388 and 360 East 121st street.

arrangement with the Powers is possible to give security against further Turkish aggression and for the protection of the neck of land extending the Propaganda. into Thrace; and against possible Serbian and Bulgarian occupation of the neighboring Ægean ports, the soldiers of the revolutionary Governent become amateur statesmen and try to figure out how to make one ration of bread feed four people hree natives and one refugee. Only by roundabout means is it pos-sible to give the inside story of the revolution and the recent execution of the Constantine Ministers, because the revolutionary censor ruthlessly silences criticism and local journalists, who dare to disobey the censor are placed in jail.

Six Years of Fends.

The execution of the six Ministers marks the tragic culmination of six years of feuds between the Constantinists and Venizelists in which personal hatred, instead of national welfare, predominated. Constantine's personal ambition was to go Venizelos one better and he encouraged the dream of Greece resuming her Byzantine tradition and the domination of Constantinople.

The Venizelists are not necessarily republicans. The socialed revolutionary government is moderately Venizelist, but prefers to maintain a tamed monarchy. They have neither a political nor a social reogram. execution of the six Ministers

It is only recently that the Greek people lost their taste for politics and apatheti-cally let anybody govern them. The overthrow of King Constantine after the overthrow of King Constantine after the Asia Minor disaster was easy. He began packing his bags when Col. Plantaris, head of the revolutionary government, first sent an airplane with revolutionary posters over Athens. Then a handful of Colonels took over the power in Athens without the people saying yes or no. The same clique is still holding Athens without the people saying yes or no. The same clique is still holding power and are exerting all their efforts to put 50,000 men into fighting shape.

But there is likelihood that other eliques may take over the Government with just as much ease as the present military clique took it away from Constantine. The revolution fiself was allocates. There are still over fifty former Constantinist leaders imprisoned in Athens and the trials will begin again next week. The revolutionary Government is making a serious effort to restore the army, but it does not inspire political confidence. Cois Plastaris and Gonairs of the revolutionary Government and the Cabinet heads undoubtedly are sincere.

Venizelos himself is not eager to re-turn, having a vivid memory of his last departure after his electoral defeat. He was assured of safety only by having machine guns mounted on his auto-
